

Columbia Credit Union
Natural History Series

Presented by: Friends of Ridgefield National Wildlife Refuge
at the Old Liberty Theater

Columbia River Artist

Thursday, September 18th 2014

Adam McIsaac I am consumed with the natural treasures of our region. I spent my childhood walking our local streams with my father, a fisheries biologist, and became forever tied to the unrefined beauty of the Pacific Northwest. Intertwined with this regions beauty are its Indigenous people. The confluence of these two forces forged my dedication to preserve their artwork and life ways. I have immersed myself in the art and culture of the Chinook people. I am compelled within my art to connecting both long time residents and one-time visitors to this feeling of place and our important history. Teaching this art has occupied my life for the last sixteen years. I believe I have an understanding of them and how they would like to see their art and culture carried forward.

Funds raised will provide for the Refuge and the Plankhouse's many programs, activities and events that thousands of visitors enjoy each year.

6:30 pm Doors open
7:15 pm Presentation begins

The Old Liberty Theater will be selling food and beverages

Tickets available at Old Liberty Theater
$10 Friends members, $15 non-members

Old Liberty Theater (360) 887-7260

FRIENDS OF RIDGEFIELD
NATIONAL WILDLIFE REFUGE